Timothy A. Price

Dear Human Resources Manager:

Following are several references that have supplied recommendations on my behalf.

Please let me know if you would like any further information.

Sincerely,

Timothy A. Price

To Prospective Employers,

I have had the pleasure of knowing and working with Tim Price for the past 36 months as CEO of GIS Dynamics. Since my first meeting with Tim he has been both pleasant and very helpful with any and all requests.

Tim has been with the company since March of 2006, and is an experienced GIS project provider. GIS's original profit centers were all GIS based work. Tim has been an excellent contributor to GIS Dynamics from its inception doing whatever it took to meet the needs of the client or company. Please see Tim's resume for his list of project experience.

GIS Dynamics has steadily moved away from GIS Project Management work. In 2008 we began selling access to our Online Measuring Service Web Sites (Go iLawn, Go iPave). Tim has participated in these sites as we do have GIS needs although minimal. He has been managing our support suite the past 12 months.

With our company having moved in this direction, the value and experience Tim provides and stimulation he seeks is in the GIS environment. We value Tim very highly as an effective contributor to our organization, but support his decision to seek a more suitable job description in his field of choice.

Please contact me directly to learn or validate any aspect of Tim's history with our company or his character as an individual.

Sincerely,

I am writing this letter as a recommendation for Mr. Timothy Price, who was employed as a Lecturer of Geoscience at Indiana University Southeast (IUS) in New Albany, Indiana. Mr. Price came to IUS from Ohio University and started in the fall semester 2005. He was selected from a national search and competed as the top candidate for position that included several Ph.D.'s. At Indiana University Southeast, his duties were primarily teaching, with courses that included: World Regional Geography and Introduction to Geographic Information Science (GIS). He approached his teaching with enthusiasm and a willingness to work hard. He was punctual, always prepared for class, and appeared very comfortable in the classroom interacting with students. He was well-liked by students, faculty, and staff alike. Tim's graduate studies in Remote Sensing using GIS prepared him to teach our Introductory GIS course. However, Tim's true forte seemed to be in his knowledge, utilization, and mastery of GIS. He has outstanding computer skills and a deep knowledge of the use and resources of the Internet. He proved a valuable asset to the department and commanded respect and appreciation of all who worked with him.

On a personal note, I found Tim to be very easy to get along with and extremely easy to work with. His low key persona, as well as his sincere attitude toward students, was greatly appreciated in an institution that depends upon a large percentage of nontraditional students in a small community.

Tim would make an outstanding, hardworking employee and should prove to be extremely valuable to any organization because of his deep computer skills and easy, outgoing personality.

Respectfully,

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this letter on behalf of Timothy Price. Mr. Price was a graduate student in the department of Geography at Ohio University where he was my graduate advisee as well as my research assistant. I am pleased to write this on his behalf, and provide my highest recommendation of Timothy Price to you.

Timothy Price is a very mature and well motivated person. His communication and "people" skills made him a valuable graduate teaching assistant and his dedication to details and willingness to work through a challenge made him extremely valuable as research assistant in my lab. During his course of study here, Tim has acquired and refined his skills in Geo-Spatial data analysis and mapping. He is adept at learning and using software products in the fields of GIS and Remote Sensing and possesses the knowledge to maintain these complex systems and support the IT environment in which they are housed.

Of note in this context are Tim's skills in the design, implementation and maintenance of computer networking environments. Tim, single handedly constructed and help to maintain my teaching and research facility here at Ohio University. A dual server system with over 30 workstations running 15 different application packages and several peripheral devices, my lab is functions to support my teaching and my externally funded research programs. Tim's skills and his desire to make the technology work have been a tremendous benefit to me. I've grown to rely on his judgment and his recommendations. I've not had the pleasure of working with a graduate student before that could step in and take on these responsibilities.

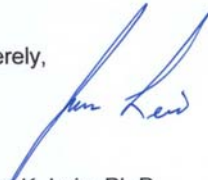

With respect to his academic performance, I can easily rank Tim within the top 15% of graduate students that I have taught over my 16 year career. His motivation and his interest in the subject served him well, and I found him a bright and capable individual. Much of this is well documented in the thesis he completed. His research and ability to apply geographic information science concept within a new and novel area produced a very strong and interesting work. Through deducting means, Tim used GIS in a hypothesis testing mode to shed light on an unresolved question in native America Archeology – the location of a scared road in Central Ohio.

His approach produced a result that should help field investigations narrow down the search area for sites documenting this feature. From data collection, preparation and analysis, Tim's IT skills, analytical abilities and discipline were in evidence and without that inner drive the project would never have been completed.

On an interpersonal level, I found Tim to be a very easy to get along with person with a sense good of humor and a positive outlook on life. Those personality traits served him well as a teaching assistant in our department, but also made him some one that was easy to work with – taking direction well, not assuming that he knew everything, and getting the job done. I'm confident where ever he ends up, he will fit in, be some one that complements the situation and works well within that particular setting.

From these statements given above, I can confidently state that Tim Price will do well in whatever area he decides to concentrate in and I have no reservations giving him my very highest recommendation. His intellectual abilities, analytical and technical skills will quickly become an asset. His interpersonal demeanor, confidence and humor will enable him to work well with any setting that he is likely to encounter. In short, his is a very able and conscientious person and I urge you to give his application your very serious consideration. If you wish clarification of any points or comments made in this letter, please feel free to contact me at (740) 593-1147 or by email at lein@ohio.edu.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am pleased to submit this letter in support of Timothy A Price. Tim has asked that I submit a letter on his behalf based on my knowledge of his work and interaction with him as a student and staff member of The Post and Athena Yearbook at Ohio University.

I've had the pleasure of working with Tim primarily related to the positions he has held at The Post and I've always found him to be an accurate and responsible person who cares deeply about his performance and works hard to achieve goals and complete tasks. Tim has served in a number of positions at The Post and The Athena and at present serves as Technical Director offering technical support and management on our Computer and related publishing systems.

Tim has the skills and knowledge to make significant contributions to your organization, I recommend him without reservation. If you are in need of other information feel free to contact me at (740) 593-4017.

Sincerely,

To whom it may concern:

I have known Timothy Price as both a co-worker and a friend, and I can tell you without qualification that you will never find someone who works harder than Tim or who cares more about doing a good job.

Tim tackles whatever assignment he is given with enthusiasm, and thinks nothing about working long into the night in order to give his employer his very best. He is no stranger to hard work, and he approaches each project with intelligence and vigor.

Tim approached his studies in geography and cartography in much the same way. I helped him copy-edit his master's degree thesis, which focused on GIS/remote sensing, and I couldn't help but be struck not only by his knowledge of the field, but also by his genuine enthusiasm for it. This field is a natural fit for Tim. It combines his longstanding interest in the world around him with his rather considerable computer and technical skills. I believe he would be a valuable addition to any staff.

Lastly, I would be remiss if I didn't mention that Tim is a genuinely nice person, whose good deeds and thoughtfulness are well-known by anyone who has had the opportunity to work with him. He is a team player who always speaks well of his supervisors and co-workers and who is always willing to lend a helping hand.

I myself have been a supervisor and know the importance of hiring good people. In hiring Tim, I believe, you could not go wrong.

Sincerely,
